My Head is a Basket of Apples
Project Description

If consciousness is the lens through which we see the world, what happens when that lens becomes clouded by some misperception? If one can't trust perception, is it possible to empty the brain and start over? My Head is a Basket of Apples explores the border between perception and reality, the window between one's mind and the outside world. While this window may appear to shift and open, to fade and change form, the mind can never move beyond its boundaries.
